

Minor in Military Science

About This Program

The Military Science program at UTA offers a unique opportunity for quality students to assess and develop their leadership skills. A wide variety of settings are provided to expose students to the styles, techniques, and tools of leadership. It also develops college-educated officers for the active Army and the reserve components (U.S. Army Reserve and Army National Guard). This affords the student the opportunity to pursue either a civilian or a military career after completing college.

Competencies

1. Upon completion of the Military Science minor, student cadets will be prepared to become officers and lead soldiers in any of the three components of the United States Army-Reserves, Active Duty, or National Guard.
2. Upon completion of the Military Science minor, student cadets will be proficient in subjects such as self-development, dismounted infantry tactics, leadership techniques, planning concepts, interpersonal skills, and critical thinking.
3. Upon completion of the Military Science minor, student cadets will have learned and developed leadership qualities necessary for Command and Staff functions and operations.
4. Upon completion of the Military Science minor, student cadets will have gained a basic working knowledge of the Military Justice System with emphasis on company-level actions and requirements, including Law of Land Warfare.
