

Bachelor of Arts in History

About This Program

The Bachelor of Arts in History explores the forces that have shaped human affairs, offering insights to address today's challenges and future uncertainties. Examining our traditions allows students to develop a deep understanding of their identity and equips them with the skills needed for successful careers in a wide range of fields.

This degree prepares students for diverse careers in teaching, archival administration, business, journalism, historical preservation and museums, law, and public affairs. It also opens opportunities in emerging fields such as digital history, video game and virtual reality storytelling, historical consulting, and other cutting-edge fields. More importantly, it equips students with the knowledge to understand societal changes, preparing them for life in a complex world. The study of history fosters well-rounded, insightful individuals ready to make a difference.

¹ Majors should complete general education core and history core requirements before enrolling in upper level history courses and should complete HIST 3300 as early as possible. The requirements of UNIV 1101 are met by HIST 3300. Students may not enroll in HIST 4395 until they have completed HIST 3300 with a "C" or better.

² Students may satisfy the language requirement through transfer credit or AVANT test; doing so will make additional elective hours available.

³ Students will create an area of concentration in consultation with the undergraduate advisor. HIST 4395 is taken as the last history course, excepting internships.
