

Minor in Classical Studies

About This Program

The Minor in Classical Studies aims to help students expand the depth and scope of their knowledge of ancient cultures and learn about different approaches to them. It will be of particular interest to those students majoring in anthropology, art, art history, history, modern languages, music, philosophy, political science, or theatre arts. In addition to these majors, students who intend to pursue graduate or professional studies in medicine, the law, art, classics, Biblical studies, ancient Near Eastern studies, or medieval studies will find a Minor in Classical Studies to their advantage.

Competencies

1. Demonstrate basic knowledge of Classical history and mythology.
2. Demonstrate basic knowledge of the other disciplines (art, archaeology, literature, language, philosophy) that are emphasized in the student's selected minor option.

Curriculum

Students may receive a minor in Classical Studies by taking 18-20 credit hours from a selection of courses offered across several disciplines. Students seeking a minor in Classical Studies should first consult with advisors in their departments or programs for approval of the minor, then with the Director of Classical Studies.
