

Post-Baccalaureate Certificate in Healthcare Informatics

About This Program

The Graduate Certificate in Healthcare Informatics prepares students for advanced practice, education, management, and research endeavors to address a change in the health care landscape. Both full-time and part-time study options are available as well as online and classroom-based programs.

Health Informatics is an evolving discipline at the intersection of data science, health information technology, health information management, and data analytics focused on improving health and healthcare by bringing theory into practice through enabling technologies.

Competencies

1. Upon completion, students will demonstrate skills in healthcare informatics to improve knowledge and information, decision-making, and effective communication.
2. Upon completion, students will possess data analytical expertise to advise areas of healthcare improvement.
3. Upon completion, students will be able to integrate healthcare-based science with analytical science to assess for patient outcomes, gaps in healthcare delivery, and advise in use of data to improve patient and clinician outcomes.
4. Upon completion, students will be able to integrate healthcare-based science with analytical science to assess for improvement in individuals, populations and communities.
